Inter-Tel Officially Unveils new 7000 Platform

Inter-Tel, a leading provider of voice and data communications solutions for businesses, has unveiled its next generation enterprise communications platform—the Inter-Tel® 7000—at the Spring VON Expo. The Inter-Tel 7000 was on display throughout the show, which is concluded on March 17 at the San Jose Convention Center in San Jose, CA.

Scheduled for release in mid-2006, the Inter-Tel 7000 is a pure IP, standards-based communications system that is designed to serve enterprises with up to 2,500 users. The system features a visionary, next-generation architecture that is expected to address business needs both today and in the future. As a software-switch platform, the Inter-Tel 7000 is built with the SIP (Session Initiation Protocol) standard at the core of the product. The Inter-Tel 7000 system has tenanting capabilities, and provides a wide-range of advanced features and functionality, including embedded presence management capabilities, multi-media devices and applications, and mobility solutions that have the capability to enhance business performance and productivity, such as increasing revenue, streamlining operations, enhancing customer service and controlling costs. Your ICS Account Rep can provide more information on this exciting new product.

Mitel Number 1 in SMB Market

Mitel® has emerged as the early IP Telephony (IPT) market leader in the small and medium business (SMB) segment, according a research report by InfoTech, a firm that specializes in global information and professional services for the telecommunications and data networking industries. The report, InfoTrack for Converged Communications: SMB Market Analysis and Forecast found that Mitel surpassed Avaya to claim top spot in the fast growing segment. In 2005, the revenue from IPT systems and converged applications for SMBs was $1.4 billion. By 2010, that market is projected to increase to $3.3 billion, which represents an average annual growth rate of 19 percent. ICS has promoted Mitel products for 25 Years.

Microsoft Internet Explorer Code Release Causes Potential Threat

Software Code that takes advantage of a security hole in Internet Explorer has been published on the Web threatening potential e-mail virus attacks that might place PC's and inherent data at risk, according to Microsoft and industry security experts. Typically, a user is enticed to open an e-mail attachment – which contains the code, or simply offered a link to a website that has the code hidden. Once the PC has been hit, one's computer could be "commandeered", their files could be stolen, and the PC could be used for future attacks of other unsuspecting users.

Those with updated/patched versions of IE 6 and Microsoft Windows XP with Service Pack 2 are affected. Microsoft expects to repair the problem by issuing an update in an upcoming security release. Until that time, they are advising Internet Explorer users to exercise greater care in opening attachments, and in visiting unknown websites.

Las Vegas
Approves
Mobile Gambling

Executone
Users:

New mobile gambling regulations were just approved by the Nevada Gaming Commission making it legal for automated/portable devices for gambling in any public area of the state's casinos, such as restaurants and poolsides. The new regulations say it's okay for a host of games, including bingo, poker, blackjack and even horse race betting. Those who lobbied for approval say that casinos will now be able to improve gambling opportunities for its guests in those non-traditional areas like pools, restaurants, and in shopping areas. Not everyone is betting on the success of the handhelds to replace traditional gambling. Others argue that being poolside or on a shopping excursion is a nice (and welcome) distraction from the casino floor—from the gambling experience. Advocates may disagree and see the move toward personal mobility and development of this new form of gambling to be natural fits. Look for these options on your next trip to Sin City.
